Reception

Senator Fleming, Governor Spellman, and Don Phelps.

Senator and Mrs. George Fleming recently hosted the Third Annual Reception honoring the Washington State Chapter of the Northwest Black Public Officials.

The Reception was attended by over 300 guests and drew many of the most influential public officials of this state including Governor John Spellman. Senator Fleming states, "the Reception is my effort at influencing a broad cross-section of this state's leaderships to the needs of black people".

Senator Fleming, who has represented the 37th District for 13 years is the Caucus Chairman of the Senate Democrats. This is one of the two major Democratic leadership positions within the Senate. He also serves on the Senate's two most powerful committees--Rules and Ways and Means.

Well It's Over

James H. Patterson.

Well, it is all over, even, the shouting. Last week the City council made its final decision, and filled the council seat, let vacant by now Mayor Doug Sutherland. The Black Community received the decision. With Umbrage, to say the least. We showed them - the council - our brightest and best but to no avail, they said no. Ex-Councilman Harold Moss - if rated on a scale of one to ten among all the rest of the aspirants would have come out a ten. There can be no doubt in any thinking persons's mind, that Moss would make a good councilman, in this or any man's town. His experience put him a step ahead of Bil Moss Lombard a smart, tough and knowledgeable campaigner. Along with two other stalwarts - Willie Horn, and Harriett Williams. Both Allen and Daniel's had a lot to offer. So believe it or not, I was naive enough to think, that one of them would make it. Now that it is all over, my common sense chides me for my naivete, saying, "Just what did you expect? Since when did white folks start considering black folks merit. When whites are competing for the same job? Then my political reasoning says, "Honestly Brother, did you really think they would provide Moss or any other Black with an incumbency base to run and win on the next time?" Well, did you! To quote Dr. Dolores Silas, "They are doing it to us again", to what we can say amen. We all wished it would happen. In my youth I heard old folks say, "If wishes were horses, then beggars would ride." So, we can't make horses out of wishes, we better try something else and that something else is to give our political aspirants more help than we have, in the past.

Example: Knowledgeable political lip service might be alright in its place but it doesn't help win elections -- all candidates need money. Small donations and cocktail sips are fine but working in the campaign office, telephoning and knocking on doors really is the bottomline. It happened on a Sunday afternoon at the Colored Womens Club House. Willie Horne's Pre-election Rally. Twelve people showed up. Why?

At a certain church at a Sunday Morning Services it was announced that a gentleman here is running for office, will you please stand Mr. Horne--that was it.

Haliburton--The Campaign Office was maned by Mrs. Haliburton and some little old ladies, most of the grand folks, the elites, who promised to help didn't come around to much, never-the-less, that man ran a great campaign. We know what the results were but he would have done a lot better with more help.

Bil Moss Lombard, what a woman! She gave it her all and Jerry, her campaign manager, they worked like Trojans with very little help. The same can be said for Harritt Williams. We wished them all well but here we go again, if wishes were horses.

No, I am not as wise as the college guys and to some of my youthful kit and kin I am a square. But this I know! Until the Black Bourgeoise and start giving the Black candidate more that moral support and lip service, we ain't gonna git no where...

NEW JERUSALEM CHIRSTIAN ACADEMY

by Yolonda M. Sacks, 10 yrs. old

The Christian School is by far the best school anyone can go to. ti's more put together. The teacher's and supervisors are more loving and caring and devoted to the school. You don't have to stay up till 3:00 and 4:00 in the morning doing your five hundred word essay that was due a week ago, because you go at your own level and pace. You don't have to worry about getting beat up, because it's just not like that. When I went to the public schools I used to hate to go to school because there was nothing to look forward to. But now I love to go to school because there is everything to look forward to. Good friends, loving teachers. I even enjoy doing my work. And most of all Bishop T.L. Westbrook, our pastor and principal, I love him with all my heart. He's like a second father to me. May The Lord Bless You.

By a parent

"I think the New Jerusalem Christian Academy is the best thing that could have happened in this area."

I have two boys in the Academy ages 11 and 9. When I enrolled them my 9 year old was failing at his previous school and counselors from the school told me had a learning disability pertaining to vision and hand coordination and he would have to be placed in special classes. He was constantly depressed and discouraged with himself and his performance in school and just about each day he would have an imaginary illness to keep from going to school. I would take time after school to help him but he had no desire to even try. He would always tell me "I can't." Since enrolling him in the Academy he has gotten between 80 and 100% on the work he does. Now he says, "I have a lot stars on my chart at school" (a reward given for their accomplishments in goal setting). He feels really good about himself anc school and most of the time thinks he can accomplish any task he sets his mind to do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor---

Criticizing and Browbeating others, for not doing what we would have them do is black folks long suit. Since I'm black, I guess I can indulge myself.

On Tuesday night February 9, 1982, I was privileged to witness an Oratorical Contest at the Colored Womens Clubhouse. Sponsored by the American Legion and directed by Mr. Rock Thomas, not the contest, not the American Legion, not Mr. Thomas will be the target of My Criticism. That will come later.

For forty minutes, I listened with pride to five female students, from various Tacoma High Schools Five brilliant young black girls. Five potential Barbara Jordans, although we were not permitted to applaud untill all the contestants had spoken. Never the less, at the end of every speech I wanted to stand and shout, Bravo-Bravo, and it seemed to me, this was the feeling of everyone in attendance. I left there feeling that our future leadership will be in good hands.

Mr. Thomas did a tremendous job with the contestants and I'm sure he was as proud of them as everyone in attendance were.

There was a somber note to the affair. Attendance was poor-- very, very poor. Hence my (Criticism). Where were all those people who are always talking about our youth being neglected, when will we as a people start supporting the efforts of our young people? and people who work with them?

I went to hear Ben Hooks. He told me what I already knew, ditto for Mayor Hatcher, but those young women told me something new. They were saying have hope, We'll carry on. My thanks to all five of them, to Rock Thomas , and the American Legion, for giving me the most wonderful evening I've had in a long time. And I've had some good evenings.

To the Editor, Pierce County Council, S.O.U.P and the General Population of Pierce County.

In recent months there have been numerous articles and letters published in our local newspapers, concerning the proposed coal port facility being considered for at least one of the 17 sites along the west coast.

Lone Star Industries's site in the University Place area is being considered for this port and has received most of the critical comments with much of the criticism coming from residents in that particular area, putting an unfair inclination against this port and against Lone Star, into the minds of the people.

To answer these criticisms I would like to make a few comments. A grave pit has been at that site since the late 1800's, operating for many years without the concern of local residents, quietly contributing many dollars into the local economy. In recent years it's operation has been under the scrutiny of local enviromnental and ecology groups and has met their requirements or regulations.

The past decade has seen considerable residental growth in this area of University Place and it is the new residents that are finding fault with the traffic, trucks, noise, dust, etc., when Lone Star and various other businesses or operations were there when they moved in. Besides Lone Star there are Glacier Sand & Gravel, Boise Cascade, New Tacoma Cemetery, Brookside Mortuary, Pat Boring Landscaping, Charles Wright Academy, a Pistol and Rifle Club and a Pierce County Maintenance Shop. There is a sewage treatment plant operating in the area and another under construction. Very recently a parking area and shop has been provided for University Place School Buses. In addition there is considerable traffic to the town of Steilacoom and to North Port Lewis also this route and the increased traffic from the new residental growth itself. This is all within an approximate one mile radius. With all this, Lone Star has been taking the brunt of all complaints, which is very unfair.

Lone Star has no trucks of it's own and most of it's sand and gravel is shipped out by rail or barge. The addition of a coal port on the site would not add truck traffic. The coal would be shipped in by rail and out again by barge to distant ports.

Some people seem to have a picture in their mind of a Pennsylvania coal mine right out of the early 1900's. Lone Star would not be a coal mine pit. The coal would be transported in and out again. It is inconceivable to think that coal dust is going to be on everyone's lawn or constantly in the air. The shipping itself would be along the water front, a drop of several hundred feet from Grandview Drive, the main residental street nearest to Lone Star. The site is not even visible from this street. The shipping of coal would have to be under the watchful guidance of local environmental and ecology groups, with federal, state and county regulations being met on every level, the same as the sand and gravel is at this time.

At a time when unemployment is at it's highest and particularly in Pierce County, we cannot afford to let an opportunity such as this pass us by, if they should choose this site. There are many other locations that are eager to be the selected site. The economic impact to an area would be immense. The 100 million dollars for erecting the facility would be an almost immediate monetary injection into the community. The escalating economic effect to Pierce County Business would be great. Once the port was operating it would provide 100-120 new and permanent jobs and contribute to the continuity of employment of railroad, coal and barge workers and perhaps even create new jobs in these fields.

Washington state was recently listed 37th in industry ratings. It is evident that there is little available for the unemployed and new jobs need to be created. We cannot afford to let this opportunity pass without trying to take advantage of it.

It is easy to be against progress or something new and different when you are employed and contented. Many of the criticisms come from such people. I hope that they are never desperate for a job as so many of our Pierce County residents are.

The addition of a possible coal port in our community needs to be looked at with an open mind and a look at the future. If we do not get this needed industry, some other community will reap the benefits that are needed so badly in Pierce County.

I hope that this letter will be printed in it's entirety, as it all needs to be said to the people so that they may have a full understanding of the situation.

Big Contract

The largest order of mid-size buses from a major transit authority has been awarded to Lawson National Distributing Co. the contract for 20 Carpenter CBW-300 transit buses, valued at over $2million brings smiles to the faces of Theodore Schuster, Exe. Director of the Chicago Transit Authority, left; CTA Board Chairman, Eugene Barnes, center; and Danny Lawson, president of Lawson National Distributing Co., following recent contract signing ceremonies in Chicago.

Lawson National Distributing Co., the largest minority-owned distributor of transit buses and parts, has been awarded a contract by the Chicago Transit Authority for 20 mid size coach manufactured by Carpenter Body Works, North Vernon, Indiana. The procurement is the largest order of mid-size buses buses from a major transit authority to date.

The total contract price, valued at $2.2 million, is also the largest of its type awarded to a minority-owned company. More significantly, it is the first time a minority company has sold buses to a major transit authority.

At the official signing ceremony awarding the contract to Lawson National Distributing Co., Danny Lawson, president, responded, "This procurement from the Chicago Transit Authority is a significant achievement not just for my company, but in the evolution and development of minority business enterprise in this country. I am most appreciative to the leadership of the CTA for allowing my company the opportunity to compete in this process, and in so doing, we have demonstrated how mainstreaming works." Remarking on the growing importance of mid-size buses, Mr. Lawson added, "This sale is a signal to the industry that mid-size buses should be considered a viable complement, even an alternative, to a standard-size bus fleet. Actually, they are more responsive to the needs of the user."

"We look forward with great anticipation to the delivery of these coaches to our system," said CTA board chairman Eugene Barnes. "Mid-size buses help to shore up a great need for a range of specialized services as well as complement our existing service."

Harold Geissenheimer, general operations manager at CTA, commented, "CTA's engineers and managers involved in this procurement were most impressed with the level of commitment to the transit industry that was demostrated by both Carpenter Body and Lawson National Distributing. Their knowledge and responsiveness to our specialized needs reflect a kind of technical expertise which measures up to our own."

Lawson National Distributing Co. and Marketing & Sales Unlimited, Inc. are companies both owned by Lawson, whose transit marketing and sales experience has spanned the last seven years. His firms sell products and services to public transportaiton agencies across the country.

JOURNALIST, AUTHOR CHET FULLER TO SPEAK AT UPS

Journalist and author Chet Fuller shares his insights on poverty and racism in the New South, Thursday, Feb. 25, at the University of Puget Sound.

Fuller speaks at 8 p.m. in Kilworth Chapel, North 18th and UPS, his appearance is sponsored by the UPS Black Student Union and Associated Students Lecture Committee.

Admission is $3 for the general public and $2 for UPS students. Tickets are available at the Information Center in the Student Union Building, at the Tacoma Mall Bon Marche and at the door.

Twice nominated for the Pulitzer Prize in journalism, Fuller left middle-class comfort as a black reporter for the "Atlanta Journal" to experience what it means to be black and poor in the New South. Posing as an uneducated, unskilled laborer seeking a job, he drifted from North Carolina to Mississippi for three months in 1978. As a result of this odyssey, he wrote the highly-acclaimed book, "I Hear Them Calling My Name: A Journey Through The New South."

Fuller found that "lives of ache and suffering, privation and hunger, and lost human dignity" continue for the mass of Southern blacks.

Fuller's work has been published in numerous national magazines and more than 500 newspapers in the United States and abroad. He has been on numerous radio and television shows, includign two appearances on NBC's "Today Show."

He appeared in a documentary on the American South called "Going Home," which was filmed in America by Thames Television LTD and shown in Great Britain in 1980.

Fuller has been a sportswriter, general assignment reporter, investigative reporter and assistant city editor. He is now a special assignment writer with the "Atlanta Journal," where he has been for nine years.

For more information on Fuller's lecture, call UPS at 756-3366.

Out of the 2 quarters he has attended he has missed 1 day - with a real illness.

At Christmas my two sons were home from college. We were having a question and answer session on who knew the most about particular subjects (the body parts and their functions and science) between my 11 year old and college son. I have to say my eleven year old knew the answers to question my college son did not know. We were amazed, I asked him where he learned it. He said at the Academy. His goal is to be a doctor or to do research in the field of medicine. The Academy teaches them to set the highest goals possible for themselves and how to reach these goals. He started by making sure I ordered him a medical chart from the University of Washington on the parts of the body at Christmas which he has hanging on his bedroom wall.

My only regret is that it did not start sooner then I would have sent all my children to the New Jerusalem Christian Academy.

PREVENTING VOTING WRONGS

By John E. Jacob

For many months the Presi dent and key Administration figures have protested that their programs and policies are not indifferent to the interests of black and minority Americans.

For at least as long black spokesmen have been unanimous in citing the crucial extension of the Voting Rights Act in strengthened form as the litmus test of the Administration's attitude toward black Americans.

From practically every standpoint--political, moral and social--the President had far more to gain than lose by a vigorous endorsement of a beefed-up Voting Rights Act.

In some ways, the decision was even made easier for him since the House passed an excellent piece of legislation that not only sailed through that chamber but also has the declared support of a majority of the Senate.

All the President had to do was say he favors Senate passage of the House bill. He would have earned plaudits from even the most bitter opponent of his economic policies, while providing desperately needed reassurance to minority people that their interests are not being ignored.

unfortunately, the President has not gone that route. He continues to say he supports extension of the Voting Rights Act, but with implied qualifications not met by the strong House bill. And his Attorney General recently refused to rule out the possibility of a veto if the Senate goes along with the House version.

What is it about the House bill that prevents the Administration from endorsing it? Probably the key provision is the change in the ground rules for deciding whether a local election law is illegal.

The House bill says it is enough for such a law to have a discriminatory effect. The Administration backs an amendment that would force the government to prove intent to discriminate before it invalidates a local law.

Clearly, the test favored by the Administration--proof of intent--would leave a gaping loophole that would deprive many black and Hispanic citizens of their right to vote.

That is because it is virtually impossible to prove intent. Failing written or taped evidence of the sort no one ever commits to public view or keeps in files that can be subpoenaed, it is impossible to prove that the reason a law as passed was to discriminate.

But the House test of a law's validity--whether it has a discriminatory effect -- is perfectly reasonable. The numbers tell the story and a law's effect is there for all to see. The effects test would allow the federal government to get at those jurisdictions that allow blacks to vote but don't allow their votes to count.

Abuse of the at-large election, virtually ensures that blacks will be excluded from a broad variety of public posts, from county boards of commissioners to county school boards.

There has been a wave of proposals to shift from district elections to at-large elections in the South, and the driving force has been the desire to exclude blacks from sharing power. That assertion is plainly obvious to anyone who knows what the South has been and what it is today, but in most cases, it could not be proved in a court of law.

That's why the House version of Voting Rights extension is so crucial. It would bring changes to at-large elections under the purview of the Justice Department and the federal courts, along with other abuses such as gerrymandered districts, overnight switches in polling places to cut the black vote, making elective offices appointive after blacks win them, and other outrages.

The Attorney General has dragged a red herring into the debate, suggesting that any standard other than intent to discriminate would result in quotas for black representation or federal challenges based on little more than disproportionate election results.

But the House bill specifies that disproportionate results do not by themselves constitute a violation. It is all reminiscent of the Justice Department's tactics on affirmative action -- raising the fears of quotas and rigid formulas -- when simple fairness is the only issue.

Church Of God In Christ On The Move

The atmosphere was charged with the presence of the Lord last Friday night at the New Jerusalem Church of God In Christ as it closed out a week long workers meeting.

During the week, the seminars were held at Greater Joy, pastored by J.T.Watson.

The theme was Stewardship: Responsibility of Every Believer. Sherman Davis, Pastor of Altheimer Church discussed the topic of Stewardship of Life where he demonstrated the importance of managing, supervising and administrating all about the Stewardship of Time..."seemingingly, we always have enough time for ourselves, but hardly ever enough to do God's work."

Elder Sam Bass, Associate Elder of New Jerusalem examined the areas in which we can be good stewards with our talents. Dr. Chas. E. Smith, Jr. illustrated the meaning of Christain giving.

Another highlight was the formal welcoming of Bishop D.L. Brooks founder and pastor of Holy Trinity Temple, COGIC by Bishop Westbrook into full fellowship with the Washington State Jurisdiction.

Rep. Dicks Speaks On Employment

"I will resist further cuts," said U.S. Rep. Norm Dicks (D-Wa) at a Saturday morning meeting of the Tacoma/Pierce County Black Collectives, in his response to several questions regarding his support of President Reagan's budget package currently under scrutiny.

He said there was no question in his mind that substantial reductions in the defense budget should take priority over anyother cuts.

Earlier tis month, Dicks supported a bill that would provide $210 million grants to states for unemployment insurance and employment service as an emergency supplemental appropriation.

"With unemployment exceeding 10 percent in Washington state--the highest post-WW II level--helping unemployed workers to find jobs should be our highest priority this session," Rep. Dicks said.

"TODAY, TOMORROW, FOREVER"

Today we know not where we stand
When we are faced with Life's demands
To give a smile, to shake a hand
At least to say, "Good morning Man!

But Tomorrow will soon be here
And what is it that we should do?
Would we say a little prayer
at least to see a dream come true?

Oh Hush! Oh Heavens! Let's be still
Let's believe in the Almighty's will
The one who sees. The one who knows
The one who cares forever, and ever.
And ever, And ever and Ever. Forever.

Selective Service System

The State Director Selective Service System, Robert B. Logan, announced that young men who were required to have registered with the Selective Service System and have failed to do so will be granted a grace period in which to register that will extend through Feb. 28, 1982. During that time these men may register without fear of prosecution for late registration.

He pointed out that failure to register is a felony, punishable by a maximum penalty of a $10,000.00 fine and/or five years in prison. Beginning March 1, 1982 Selective Service will carry out a program of full compliance with the registration law. The Department of Justice in coorddination with the Selective Service System will initiate appropriate enforcement action. This will include action against the young men who are required to be registered but have failed to do so. These names will be referred by Selective Service to the Department of Justice for possible criminal prosecution. All men born since January 1, 1960 are required to register. Men born in 1964 must register as they reach their eighteenth birthday - 30 days before or after.

Nationally, as well as in Washington State, about 90% of the men born in 1960, 1961, and 1962 have registered. However, the percentage of men born in 1963 who have registered is only about 71% in Washington State.

There are about 36,000 Washington State men in this latter group - those who became 18 in 1963. Only about 25,000 have registered, based on registration rates through September 1981, which means that over 10,000 18 year old men have not registered. If they do not register by February 28, 1982 they will be subject to prosecution.

Logan said "With the removal of any lingering doubts as to the future of the registration program as announced by President Reagan on January 7, I am confident that the young men of registration age will comply with the law. They are a responsible group - 6.6 million of them across the Nation have already registered. I am sure that those who haven't, will act as responsibly as their peers and register during the grace period. It is only a matter of remindign them of their obligation.."

Registration is a simple process. A man fills out a form at any U.S. Post Office which asks for his name, address, telephone number, Social Security number and date of birth. He must bring some form of personal identification with him such as driver's license or Sociai Security card.

WOMEN SPEAKS

SEX AND THE JOB SEARCH
By Valerie D. Gordon

Two weeks ago, an excited friend called me to share her good news: "Yes, I can't believe it, I got a job with XXXX Insurance Company tripling my measely salary I made working at the office," she said, elated about her success. "How did you get it?" I replied, happy for her and mixed with tinges of jealousy because it wasn't me.

"Well, I went there to get car insurance, and just asked if they had any openings," she answered. "I applied and was called in for an interview. And you know, I don't believe that man saw my face once. Every time I looked at him, he was staring at my cleavage!"

We laughed as she continued talking about the new position and how nice the Black man looked who interviewed her. When the phone call ended, I hung up thinking how lucky she must be.

Then it hit me. Luck had nothing to do with her securing that job at all. With minimum experience, some exposed cleavage and possibly some leg, she was on her way to a financially rewarding career. Considering her sexiness and her resume, the man hired her, hoping that she may even sell some insurance, too.

This is a type of discrimination in its most subtle form. Just as a company hires an unexperienced black man who has a good chance of failing as opposed to hiring a more qualified minority who has a reputation in the community, this interviewer discriminated against my friend by hiring her on the basis of her sexiness.

To illustrate my point: a black man was hired as a drafter for a prominent engineering company. He told the personnel manager that he had no experience in drafting and that he had only completed 2 years of engineering at a 4 year institution. He was hired and given superior work to do. No matter how early he came in or how late he stayed, he was not able to complete the work to his supervisor's satisfaction.

Three months later he was called in for a conference, refused a raise and was told they expected improvement in his work. After 3 more months, he was fired. The state unemployment office ruled that he could not collect unemployment insurance because he was fired for not meeting the employer's standards.

The company had hired its token Black. Paying him a smaller salary than a more qualified minority, they gave him work they knew he couldn't do. So they fired him, proving once again, that blacks are inferior to whites.

The same situation exists for my friend. She hasn't had any selling experience only office work. She may or may not succeed in selling the necessary quota of insurance to keep her job. But once she was hired on the basis of her sexual attractiveness, she will always be considered in that way. She will be subject to unwanted approaches, sexist jokes and comments and treated in a demeaning manner. Of course, women in all phases of society encounter this type of sexual harrassment, but men who hire women on the basis of their sexuality has little respect for their mind or capabilities.

If she is fired, her boss would cover his mistake by saying women are not cut out for this type of work and should stick to caring for babies. If she quits, she's too soft and couldn't stand the heat, proving women's inferiority to men in the business world. And if she succeeds, she will be accused of "sleeping her way to the top." There is no winning--a catch 22 situation at best.

The best thing to do is avoid this type of discrimination in the job search. What you wear is important in that you impress the interviewer by projecting the proper professional image. But most importantly, you should be qualified for the position and then stress these qualifications to the employer. Mention the projects you have implemented and completed, your ability to catch on quickly to a new or different type of work and your past records of achievements. Using tact and possibly humor, keep his eyes off your body and on your mental agility and capabilities.

Remind him that he is not allowed to ask questions regarding your marital status or plans for children. Assure him that you are a professional and will be treated and respected as such.

Respecting yourself, you can use verbal self-defense against sexist or racist remarks, by using pat lines. Simple statements like "That is demeaning to both of us", "That is tacky", or "Excuse me your ignorance is showing" will let the interviewer or co-worker know you will not be walked on.

But most importantly, understand the role sexual politics play in anything we do. Sure, we want the job and will do almost anything to get it, even if that means showing some bust or some leg. But what if you are interviewed by a female or some males who are repulsed by such a sight in a professional setting. And understand too, like a prostitute, what you are selling carries a price--a price most women can't afford to pay.

CONSUMER ALERT

Complaints continue to come in about a roving band of rip-off roofers who primarily solicit older persons and mobile home residents as customers, Attorney General Ken Eikenberry reports.

These operators typically state that they happen to be in the area on another job and, therefore, can repair your roof at a bargain price. Often, they will even reduce that quoted price somewhat if the prospective customer can't afford it.

By most reports, these operators spray on an aluminum solution which has been diluted 50 to 1 or even 75 to 1. The diluted spray washes totally off the next time it rains for 20 minutes.

Noting that reputable roofing firms do not usually make door-to-door sales calls, Eikenberry offered these tips for people who receive such an offer from an itinerant operator:

1. Ask for the person's state contractor's license number.
2. Check on it, even if the claims to be licensed, by calling the state Department of Labor and Industries (753-6807) in Olympia.
3. Get and check personal references from people the contractor has worked for in the past.
4. Sleep on it. Get the preson's phone number, do your independent checking, then make your decision.

If you encounter unlicensed persons offering roofing or other contracting services, report that person to the Department of Labor and Industries.

SSI Report

It is very important that people who are receiving supplemental security income (SSI) report their change of circumstances imediately.

Failure to report your change of circumstances would result in an overpayment which would have to be repaid as high as $100 for not reporting when he or she was supposed to.

Reports can be made by telephone, by mail, or in person. Any report should include name, social security claim number, and the change that is being reported, date that it occurred, address, and signature if the report is made by mail.

A person getting SSI because he or she is disabled or blind must report if his or her condition improves, taking a job, or change in work expenses. More detailed information about reporting requirements can be obtained a the Social Security Office. located at 1208 So. 10th St. The telephone number is 1-800-562-6350.

PHONECENTER STORE

There is a new store in town. It's Pacific Northwest Bell's PhoneCenter Store at the Tacoma Mall which opened February 8.

Gene McGrath, PNB manager, said customers can choose telephones, pick up or return sets and arrange for replacement of telephone equipment at the PhoneCenter.

"We're really pleased to be able to serve the telephone needs of our Tacoma customers from this convenient location," he said. The PhoneCenter Store will be open from 10 am to 9 pm Monday through Friday, 10 am to 6 pm on Saturday, and 11 am to 5 pm on Sunday.

McGrath said that customers who buy a Design Line® phone from now until February 13 will receive a free Presto® popcorn popper.
